

THE HAUNTING IN BUBBA'S BEDROOM

BY BOB FOUNTAIN, SPECTRAL TECH

Spectral Tech recently conducted an investigation in West Tennessee that centered around a three-year-old little boy, nicknamed Bubba, who either had a very overactive imagination or something unseen was taking an interest in him.

Over the years, most of the cases I have investigated focused on a single site, building, or residence. Although this case is about a single residence, there appears to be a larger picture taking shape.

This investigation started by getting a request from an acquaintance, Amanda, who knew I investigated claims of the paranormal. Amanda gave me some of the claims of activity at her friend's house and the contact information I requested so I could do a pre-investigation interview.

My initial thoughts were that we were dealing with a child with an active imagination and his imaginary friend. Those thoughts changed.

During the hour-long interview with his grandmother, who is raising Bubba and his sister, there were other indicators that he was not all imagination.

Feelings of being watched, dogs and cats acting strange, and Bubba carrying on one-sided conversations alone in his bedroom and even during his sleep. Bubba's 4-year-old old sister was once afraid to go into her bedroom because an unseen little girl was in her room playing with her toys.

Finally, Bubba came to his grandmother and said something he called "the man" had scared him and said it was going to eat him. This scared his grandmother for good reason. No imaginary friend threatens to eat you, and it also prompted our team to investigate immediately.

The Investigation

Tara Finley, Brandon Bobbitt, and I met Cheryl (the grandmother) at her house on December 2, 2020, and begun our initial investigation. The area was immediately familiar to us. We had investigated another residence less than a quarter-mile from Cheryl's house a year earlier.

A 3-year-old boy at this home needed help, and fast. He was reportedly being terrorized by a scary male spirit.

All three of us felt subtle changes in the energy present when entering the house, and even stronger changes when entering the bedroom areas where the children slept. After an EMF sweep was performed throughout the house, it was decided that the focus for this investigation would be primarily in the children's bedrooms where most of the activity was reported.

We set up the BooBuddy paranormal tool in one of the children's bedrooms. Several times during the night, it indicated that it was being touched by unseen hands.

Both Tara and Brandon initiated EVP sessions in the children's bedrooms and other areas of the house. Although there was virtually no traditional EVPs picked up on the digital recorders during the evidence review, the activity verbally noted on the recorder being used by Tara indicated the entities were willing to communicate through the K-II EMF Meters. Tara and Brendon always verbally state the responses they get from the meters during EVP sessions so there is a complete picture of what is going on during evidence review.

During the investigation, unseen hands set off BooBuddy, which is a Teddy bear with sensors embedded inside.

During these EVP sessions, it appeared that we were communicating with two young children (a boy and a girl). Through interaction with the K-II EMF Meters, they indicated that there was the spirit of a bad man there that they were afraid of. It should be noted that if the entities were indeed the spirits of children, it would explain why the BooBuddy was frequently being touched (it's a Teddy bear with various monitors) and why there was a reluctance to communicate through the digital recorders. Often, young children tend to be shy and are only willing to communicate nonverbally.

The SLS camera picked up briefly what appeared to be a figure sitting in a rocking chair in the living room, but it left after we acknowledged its presence and never returned.

Evidence Review

What we found based on the initial claims, review of the digital recorders, and personal experiences includes:

- The activity does not appear to be residual energy and is very likely an active haunting.
- There appear to be three entities present in the house: a young girl, a young boy, and an adult male, which the young entities say is scary.
- The male entity has taken an active interest in Bubba and has reportedly broken his toys and said scary things to him, which is of some concern. Although benign right now, this interest could also evolve into an attachment.

- The male entity did not communicate with us and appeared to be hiding from us during investigating Bubba's bedroom.
- The female child spirit is the most talkative and was quick to point out that different entities are present. She also says she tries to protect Bubba from the scary man.

Conclusion

Although the activity is fairly current, there is no way to pinpoint how long these entities have been present. Young children are more aware of the spirit realm around them and can sense and sometimes see entities that adults simply cannot. Besides having to deal with interactions with entities no one else can see, children often have to deal with adults who do not believe them or know what to do.

The general area has been reported to have paranormal activity. When we investigated activity within a quarter-mile from this house, we were told that Native Americans and Civil War soldiers were buried in the area. The Fort Pillow Massacre during the Civil War is within 9 miles of this location.

We found out that a 19-year-old boy died in an ATV accident very close to Cheryl's house in 2016 and could be the man that is considered scary. If this man appears in spirit covered in blood from his injuries, I would think it would certainly be scary to children.

We also found that another man died very close to this house when his car crashed into a tree at high speed. Any of these conditions could cause restless spirits in this area to interact with living beings.

So, is this a case of an individual haunting or just a piece of a much larger area filled with negative and restless spirits? Are Civil War soldiers upset about dying so young and being buried with no markers, or are Native Americans angry that their land has been defiled?

We recently learned that the remaining homeowners in the cul-de-sac we investigated last year (close to Cheryl's home) are all trying to leave because of paranormal activity. Are there angry entities actively affecting the living in this area, and are they responsible for so many vehicle deaths in this small area?

We gave Cheryl several options as to how she could proceed next, and she opted to request help from her church to remove the entities from her house. We agreed with her decision and told her that we would always come back to help in any way we could if needed.

Time will tell if this investigation is over, but our hope is that Bubba and his family will find resolution as soon as possible. ♦